

The world is perceived as a technological artifact. When it should be perceived as a world full of art...and that's a fact. As I said before "I'm trying to break the mold" and this gets slightly easier the more I get old. They say with knowledge comes power and that knowledge is power. The way I see if you give me a listen ill make it rain like an informational shower. I'll keep you on your toes with stories from my past, until you figure out "We have found the chosen one at last!" By the time you realize that I'm spittin from the heart, you'll be left in the dust while I'm on a new part. I'm building my kingdom up from the start and whether you're allowed entry is decided on my fate of heart.

All these other rappers acting like they all cracked the code but in reality they're just on a different mode(easy). They believe cussing is the way to flow. My rhymes have brought goosebumps and tears all in one go. Last I checked I didn't have one cuss word though.

The funny thing is while I'm spittin from deep within, other rappers meanings be as thin as the top layer of skin. While I know I'm not the only one to grow up struggling, I am one of the ones to actually get up stop huffin and puffin and speak up about the corruption. While it may seem like I'm leaving on a cliffhanger the next part is gonna be a banger morally about anger.

--Omar Guevara, Gifford